HE KILLED A GREASER.

Hoosier Held on That Very Trifling Charge.

DOES NOT LIKE IT IN JAIL.

Attention of the State Department Has Been Called to the Case and Mexico Has Been Asked About the Matter.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 23.—Morton, son of the late Colonel R. N. Hudson, has written to former Secretary of the Navy Thompson and other of the old friends of his father for their intervention in his behalf with the Mexican authorities.

He says that on Feb. 13 he and a companion, Joe Powell, were attacked by two Mexican highwaymen, and that as a result of the affray he (Hudson) shot and killed one of the men, and that the other has since died from a wound Hudson inflicted. Both Americans were arrested, but Powell was afterward released.

Senator Fairbanks has been asked by Colonel Thompson to use his influence in aiding the young man, and the senator has received a note from the state department saying the attention of the Mexican government has been called to the case.

Hudson writes from the jail at Tenancingo, saying he expects his case will be heard in Toluca in a day or two.

To License Barbers.

Anderson, Ind., March 22.—Indiana barbers held a mass meeting in the city and effected a permanent organization, with Gus Dye of Anderson, president and secretary; H. M. Garrigus of Muncie, first vice president; John F. Brunskill of Fort Wayne, second vice president, and Lloyd Griffin of Muncie, treasurer. They have decided to present to the coming legislature a bill providing that all barbers pass a state examination and be licensed by the state the same as doctors.

Hip Dislocated.

New Albany, Ind., March 23.—William P. Biel, an employe in the stove foundry of Terstegge, Gohmann & Company, has for more than a year been suffering from a malady supposed to be rheumatism. He suffered intense pain in his left hip, and has been confined to his home, being able to navigate only by the aid of a crutch. Mr. Biel went to Louisville a few days ago to consult a specialist of that city, and the physician discovered that the hip had been dislocated.

A Bloody Battle.

Brazil, Ind., March 23.—Twenty-five Austrian and Hungarian miners engaged in a bloody battle at Caseyville in a saloon orgy. A man named Mecki was fatally shot. William Bolinski was shot in the left side and is believed to be fatally injured. Paul Peperock, George Illass, John Lechner, Ben Moore, Jesse Downs, Andy Robson, Clint McDowell and Joe Hook were stabbed more or less seriously.

Wife Drowned.

Evansville, Ind., March 23.—Edward Monahan and wife of Posey county attempted to cross a creek which had been swollen by the heavy rains. The bed was lifted from the wagon by the high water, and Mrs. Monahan was drowned. The husband swam a half mile with his wife in his arms, but became exhausted and she drowned near dry land.

Secured a Verdict.

Greenfield, Ind., March 23.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Mary Beaupre against the Citizens' Street Railroad company of Indianapolis for $50,000 damages returned a verdict awarding the plaintiff $2,500 damages. Mrs. Beaupre claims to have been injured in 1896 by being thrown from a car.

Freak of Lightning.

Shelbyville, Ind., March 22.—Mrs. Martin Davis is confined to her home in Marietta and in a serious condition from a queer prank played by lightning, which struck the chimney of her home, ran down the same through the stove pipe into the stove and out of the stove door into Mrs. Davis' lap, knocking her unconscious.

Poor But Proud.

Indianapolis, March 23.—The dead man found hanging by the neck in the woods was identified as Charles Durkee, 75, who came here a few weeks ago from Chicago. Being dunned for his room rent, and not having the money to pay, he killed himself. His only known relative is a son in Montana.

Death of Bradley's Sister.

Lexington, Ky., March 23.—Mrs. Margaret Scott, sister of Governor Bradley, died at Somerset. The governor will not change his plans for attending the launching of the battleship Kentucky at Newport News Thursday.

WOODSIDE HOTEL BURNED.

Threatening Fire Breaks Out in Eastern Part of Colorado Springs.

Colorado Springs, Colo., March 22.—Fire, which broke out in the Woodside, a large frame hotel, which was unoccupied, threatened for several hours to wipe out the entire eastern end of the city.

The fire was brought under control shortly after 3 a. m. The Woodside and several adjoining cottages were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $120,000.

A high wind was blowing and embers from the burning buildings were carried several blocks. The water mains were too small to give the required pressure and the firemen were also hampered by lack of hose. Help was summoned from Colorado City and Manitou.

Earlier in the night Sheriff Boynton's residence was burned, causing a loss of $10,000. This fire also endangered much surrounding property.

Protecting a Murderer.

Shanghai, March 23.—Telegrams from Chung King Fu regarding the sacking of the Methodist Medical mission in the Kiang Pehi country show that the Chinese militia is now there in large force and refuses to allow the execution of the death sentence passed upon the murderer of the student who was killed by the rioters. The foreign consuls have demanded that the Tao Tai disperse the militia, execute the murderer, arrest the leaders of the rioters, pay 500 taels for the property destroyed, allow the mission to reoccupy its premises and engage to protect the members of the mission.

New Railroad Proposed.

Seattle, Wash., March 23.—The British Columbia, Seattle and Pacific Coast railroad has made a proposition to the city council for a franchise for right of way 30 feet wide over Railroad avenue. It was stated to the city council that it was the purpose of the company to construct a railroad from Portland, Or., to Seattle, and thence to the British Columbia boundary. The company was willing that a condition be imposed on the franchise that the work of construction should begin within 30 days and the line be finished within 18 months. The road will cost between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000.

Preacher Sent to the Penitentiary.

Saginaw, West Side, Mich., March 23.—Rev. Orson D. Taylor, The Dalles (Or.) divine who has been in jail here for several months, and against whom proceedings for securing money under false pretenses have been dragging along in the circuit court for a year or more, was sentenced by Judge Snow to six years in Jackson state prison. The complainant, Dr. C. B. Cornell, alleged that Taylor induced him to buy $5,000 worth of shares in the Interstate Investment company of The Dalles, Or., a concern which did not exist.

England Is Not Plotting.

London, March 23.—In the house of commons Sir James Ferguson, Conservative member for Northeast Manchester, questioned the government as to whether there was any truth in the accusations brought by the United States senate committee on foreign relations in the committee's Hawaiian report, to the effect that Great Britain was plotting for the absorption of Hawaii. Mr. Curzon said there was no truth in the allegations made.

Lybrand Renominated.

Delaware, O., March 23.—The Republicans of the Eighth district renominated A. S. Lybrand for congress. Contesting delegates from two counties who were not seated, together with 18 delegates from another county, declared their intention to hold a rump convention soon and make another nomination. The bolters represent the opposition to the national administration.

Shingle Mill Burned.

Tacoma, March 23.—The Pacific mill, the largest shingle mill in the world, operated by Metcalf & Wade, was completely destroyed by fire. The property is owned by the Sater Banking company of San Francisco, and their loss will be about $100,000. There were 2,000,000 shingles in the kilns. Within 30 minutes from the alarm the immense plant was a total ruin.

Looked Like a "Fake."

San Francisco, March 23.—"Kid" Parker of Boston finished Henry Lewis of San Francisco in half a round. Lewis went down from every blow and was crowd yelled "fake."

THE CAFES OF VIENNA.

The Part They Play in the Life of the Gay Austrian Capital.

Cafes are for the Viennese a second home, and they all have two kinds of clients—the "stammgaeste" or habitués, and the "laufande," or transients. The habitués, commonly called "wirt-hausbruder" (cafe brothers), have tables reserved for them, and woe betide the man who ventures to take possession of this sacred property. There are many Viennese who in the past 30 or 40 years have sat at the same table in the same corner day after day, drinking the same brew of beer or brand of wine and smoking the same sort of tobacco in the same old pipes. A stammgaeste generally spends from three to four hours every day at his cafe, the natural result being a great loss of time and money. But the Viennese are not miserly. The maxim they follow is found in the German proverb which seems to have been written on purpose for them, "Leben und leben lassen" ("Live and let live").

Besides these cafes there are a number of "restaurant cellars" in Vienna, similar to the cellars of Leipzig, Hamburg and Bremen, where people go to drink wine and partake of delicatessen, pates, oysters, caviar, smoked fish, Westphalian sausages and other eatables of the same general sort. There are certain cellars, like the old Felsenkeller, which are arranged like grottoes. The Felsenkeller has been visited by many European celebrities, and on its walls are scratched the autographs of Victor Hugo, Meyerbeer, Wagner, Brahms, Alexandre Dumas, father and son, and many others.

The most picturesque of these cellars is the Esterhazy keller, open every day from 11 a. m. until 1:30 the following morning. In this subterranean resort there are no tables, chairs or gaslights. A few old benches against the walls and some wretched candles are the only furnishings. The demimonde, petit monde and the quart de monde frequent this cellar to a great extent. A perfect babel of languages prevail—German, Polish, Czech, Russian, French, Hungarian, Slavonian, Italian, Servian, Bulgarian, Roumanian and Greek may all be heard spoken in the space of a few minutes, giving a splendid idea of Vienna's cosmopolitan nature and a striking proof that the imperial capital of the Hapsburgs is not a German city, but a town which is neither European nor oriental, and possessing a cachet of its own, which partakes both of the east and the west. Notwithstanding the Bohemian aspect of this Esterhazy keller and the poor quality of the food provided the two kinds of wine served are worthy of a royal table.

Excellent wine is to be found at all Vienna cafes, much of which is native. Austria and Hungary together grow some 15 different wines. Emperor Charles IV transplanted in 1348 vines from Burgundy to Melnik and Czeronesk. In lower Austria vineyards are found 6,000 feet above the sea level. The wines of Gumpoldskirchen, Voestau and Klosterneubourg can vie with Burgundy and certain Rhine wines.

In southern Tyrol, in Styria, Carinthia, Moravia, Illyria, Dalmatia, Hungary and Croatia first class wine is made and forms in the Slav provinces the habitual drink of rich and poor alike. The consequence is that the Slav races of Austria are far more energetic and of finer physique than the German Austrians, who become bloated by excessive beer drinking.

It is not easy to find good food at the Vienna cafes and restaurants, however. The Viennese manner of cooking is as international as are the Viennese themselves. The best is found in the hotels, all of which have three different classes of restaurants—one underground for the "petits employes" and coachmen, one on the ground floor for the Viennese upper and middle classes and finally one on the first floor for foreigners. For 50 cents of American money a Viennese gets a portion of meat, a vegetable and a sweet dish, which is certainly not cheap when compared with other continental capitals. The usual time for dinner is from 1 to 3 p. m., and supper is taken at any time between 7 and 11. As the theaters are over by 10, supper is taken afterward. At that time of night every cafe in Vienna is crowded. A Viennese who has gone to the theater with his wife and children would fracture all conventions if he did not take his family to sup at a cafe.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Sermon on Money.

A colored exhorter said recently, in the course of a sermon on "Money, the Great Evil":

"My brotherin, money cause mo' trouble in dis worl' dan anyting I knows on. Fac' is, de devil is in de dollar. When I see a man wid a pocket full er money, I say ter myself, 'Dar's a man what needs a guardeen,' an I feels des like takin him home an lockin up dat money fer him. Ef any er you in de hearin er my voice is got money on yo' pussen, bring it right heah, an lay it on de altar an go yo' ways an lemme pray over it till a blessin come ter it. Doan wait ter count it; des come forward an unload!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Precolumbian Books in America.

George Byron Gordon, the explorer, contributes to The Century an account of the discoveries in Copan under the title of "The Mysterious City of Honduras." Concerning the ancient race of Mayas Mr. Gordon says:

Not only did traditions exist in the minds of the people, but many of the old Indian families still preserved their books, the remnants of once extensive libraries, in which the history, traditions and customs of the people were recorded. All these books that the Spanish priests could lay their hands upon they burned. Four only have come down to us—priceless relics that in some unknown manner found their way into European libraries, where they lay hidden until unearthed by scholars of recent years. The books of the Mayas consisted of long strips of paper made from maguey fiber, and folded after the manner of a screen so as to form pages about 9 by 5 inches. These were covered with hieroglyphic characters, very neatly drawn by hand, in brilliant colors. Boards were fastened on the outside pages, and the completed book looked like a neat volume of large octavo size. The characters in which they are written are the same as those found upon the stone tablets and monuments in the ruined cities of Palenque and Copan.

This system of writing, which is entirely distinct from the picture writing of the Aztecs, was the exclusive possession of the Mayas. It was a highly developed system, and, as investigations have shown, embraced a number of phonetic elements. In this respect, as in many others, the Mayas were far in advance of any other American people. A venerable but vague and elusive legend that has come down to us ascribes the invention of these characters to Itzamna, the Maya Cadmus, a great hero god who in the beginning of their history as a nation led the people from the east across the sea, gave them laws and ruled over them for many years.

Lord Alvanley.

Lord Alvanley followed Sheridan and Brummell as a sayer of good things, but those most generally quoted have a touch of sarcastic malice, for cynical talk was a fashion of the time. When Brummell made his midnight flitting to Boulogne at the suit of the Jews, he remarked complacently, "Brummell has done quite right to be off; it was Solomon's judgment." He was a kindhearted man and gave many proofs of generosity to acquaintances in distress. One of those he had assisted was the well known Jack Talbot, a reckless prodigal, who had repeatedly borrowed of him. When Talbot was beggared and lying on his deathbed, Alvanley met his doctor and inquired about the invalid. The answer was: "My lord, I fear he is in a bad way. I had to use the lancet."

"You should have tapped him, doctor," said Alvanley coolly. "I fear he has more claret than blood in his veins." Much more excusable, considering the man and the circumstances, was Alvanley's expostulation when he had been persuaded to dine with the eccentric millionaire Neeld in his new mansion in Grosvenor square. The host, with the vulgarity of a nouveau riche, was expatiating on the sumptuous decorations of the apartment and, in the words of Milton, "letting dinner cool." "I don't care what your gilding cost," said Alvanley bluntly, "but I am most anxious to make a trial of your carving, for I am famished."—Cornhill Magazine.

A Medieval Feast.

The banquet which was held here at the marriage of Count Ulrich with the Bavarian Princess Sabina has a luster all its own. Seven thousand guests were present, and for their serving 800 of the handsomest people that could be found in all the land were brought to the castle and costumed in red and yellow cloth and in the 14 colossal kitchens were serving day and night nearly the same number of cooks. The feast continued one week, and during this time there were consumed 136 oxen, 1,800 calves, 570 capons, 1,200 chickens, 2,759 fieldfairs, 11 tons of salmon, 90 tons of herrings, 120 pounds of cloves, 40 pounds of saffron, 200,000 eggs, 3,000 sacks of flour and 1,760,000 gallons of wine. For eight days and nights a public wine fountain poured uninterruptedly through eight tubes red and white wine for all that wished to drink.—"Stuttgart," by Elise J. Allen, in Harper's Magazine.

Sacred Fires of India.

The sacred fires of India have not all been extinguished. The most ancient which still exists was consecrated 12 centuries ago in commemoration of the voyage made by the Parsees when they emigrated from Persia to India. The fire is fed five times every 24 hours with sandal wood and other fragrant materials, combined with very dry fuel. This fire, in the village of Oodwada, near Bulsar, is visited by Parsees in large numbers during the months allotted to the presiding genius of fire.—Exchange.

"Thirteen is an unlucky number in all cases," said Jarley.

"I don't know," said Butler. "I'd rather have $13 than $12."

"I wouldn't," said Jarley. "If I had $12, I'd spend only $12, but if I had $13 I'd spend $13."—Harlem Life.

A PRISONER'S RUSE.

HOW ROC ESCAPED FROM THE SPANISH PRISON BY A TRICK.

A Clever Pirate Who Won Freedom For Himself and His Companions by Forging a Letter and Playing on His Captor's Fears.

Mr. Frank R. Stockton, telling St. Nicholas readers about "The Buccaneers of Our Coast," describes the clever escape of Roc, the Brazilian, a famous pirate, from captivity among the Spaniards at Campeachy. Mr. Stockton says:

When he was coming into the bay, Roc had noticed a large French vessel that was lying at some distance from the town, and he wrote his letter as if it had come from the captain of this ship. In the character of this French captain he addressed his letter to the governor of the town, and in it he stated that he had understood that certain companions of the coast, for whom he had great sympathy—for the French and the buccaneers were always good friends—had been captured by the governor, who, he heard, had threatened to execute them.

The French captain, by the hand of Roc, went on to say that if harm should come to these brave men, who had been taken and imprisoned when they were doing no harm to anybody, he would swear, in his most solemn manner, that never for the rest of his life would he give quarter to any Spaniard who might fall into his hands, and he moreover threatened that any kind of vengeance which should become possible for the buccaneers and French united to inflict upon the Spanish ships, or upon the town of Campeachy, should be taken as soon as possible after he should hear of any injury that might be inflicted upon the unfortunate men who were then lying imprisoned in the fortress.

When the slave came back to Roc, the letter was given to him with very particular directions as to what he was to do with it. He was to disguise himself as much as possible, so that he should not be recognized by the people of the place, and then in the night he was to make his way out of the town, and early in the morning was to return as if he had been walking along the shore of the harbor, when he was to state that he had been put on shore from the French vessel in the offing with a letter which he was ordered to present to the governor.

The slave performed his part of the business very well. The next day, wet and bedraggled from making his way through the weeds and mud of the coast, he presented himself at the fortress with his letter, and when he was allowed to take it to the governor no one suspected that he was a person employed about the place. Having fulfilled his mission, he departed, and when seen again he was the same servant whose business it was to carry food to the prisoners.

The governor read the letter with a disquieted mind. He knew that the French ship which was lying outside the harbor was a powerful vessel, and he did not like French ships anyway. The town had once been taken and very badly treated by a little fleet of French and English buccaneers, and he was very anxious that nothing of the kind should happen again.

There was no effective Spanish force in the harbor at that time, and he did not know how many buccaneering vessels might be able to gather together in the bay if it should become known that the great pirate Roc had been put to death in Campeachy.

It was unusual for a prisoner to have powerful friends so near by, and the governor took Roc's case into most earnest consideration. A few hours' reflection was sufficient to convince him that it would be very unsafe to take risks with such a dangerous prize as the pirate Roc, and he determined to get rid of him as soon as possible. He felt himself in the position of a man who has stolen a baby bear and who hears through the woods the roar of an approaching parent. To throw away the cub and walk off as though he had no idea there were any bears in that forest would be the inclination of a man so situated, and to get rid of a great pirate without provoking the vengeance of his friends was the natural inclination of the governor.

Now, Roc and his men were treated well and, having been brought before the governor, were told that in consequence of their having committed no overt act of disorder they would be set at liberty and shipped to Spain upon the single condition that they would abandon piracy and agree to become quiet citizens.

To these terms Roc and his men agreed without argument. They declared they would retire from the buccaneering business and that nothing would suit them better than to return to the ways of civilization and virtue. There was a ship about to depart for Spain, and on this the governor gave Roc and his men free passage to the other side of the ocean. There is no doubt that our buccaneers would have much preferred to have been put on board the French vessel, but Roc made no suggestion of the kind, knowing how astonished the French captain would be

What do the Wall street gang care how many lives are lost by such devilish means as the blowing up of the Maine, so long as "values do not suffer?"

Had any of the Wall street gang been on a war vessel and given out such sounds as they have since the Maine affair, they would very likely have been swung up at the yard arm at the hands of a drum-head courtmartial.

If the rich bugs are so afraid lest "values suffer" at the mere mention of an armed conflict, what might be expected of the whole crew of them were they the Government's dependance to uphold the national honor?

And More to Follow.

In spite of the rain last night there was a fair attendance at the union meeting at the court house and among the audience was some of the best people of the city. "It is certainly inspiring," said a man at the close of the service, "to see the young men of the Y. M. C. A. which largely composed the choir taking such interest." The singing was led by Mr. Harry Curran with R. L. Hoeflich as organist. The organ used for this service was kindly furnished by Mr. Gerbrich.

The opening prayer was made by Rev. F. W. Harrop, pastor of the M. E. Church, which was full of thankfulness and tender appeal. Mr. Harry Curran then sang a solo, "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love." The evangelist took his text from Second Kings, fifth chapter and twelfth verse, "Are not Abana and Pharpar rivers of Damascus better than all the waters of Israel? May I not wash in them and be clean?" And from this he drew a picture of how people expected to be converted in their way, but must come in God's way. Two more were converted last night. Service at 7:15 to-night. Everybody welcome.

The Troublesome Dust.

The bane of the ideal housekeeper's life is dust, and yet this seemingly insignificant, exasperating dust has been a study of scientists for a century. "When a beam of sunlight enters a darkened room, it can be seen along its whole course," says one writer. "The light is reflected to every side and made to reach the eye by the dust in the air of the room. We do not see the sun-beam, but the dust which is illumined by it. As unimportant as this curious stuff seems, it plays a conspicuous part in nature. It is what makes the sky appear blue, and when we look at the sky we see the dust illumined by the sun. Light goes through all the gases—the dust catches it, reflects it in every direction, and so causes the whole atmosphere to appear clear, in the same way that it makes the sunbeam visible in the dark room.

"Without this strange, wonderful dust there would be no blue sky. It would be as dark or darker than on moonless nights. The glowing disk of the sun would stand immediately against the black background, thus producing blinding light where the sun's rays fall and deep black shadows where they do not. It is to dust that we owe the moderately tempered daylight adapted to our eyes, and it is dust that contributes to the beauty of the scenery. The finest dust gives the blue tone to the sky, while the coarser kind produces an almost black appearance.

"The clouds consist of dust and vapor. If there be only a little dust, all the vapor is precipitated upon it, and so loads the clouds with water that they sink in heavy drops to the ground. Without dust the vapor would penetrate houses, making everything mold with damp. We should feel upon going out that our clothes were becoming saturated and umbrellas would be a useless protection. It is hard, indeed, to conceive how different everything would be if there were no dust. This trivial common stuff has its considerable part in the processes of nature, and there is much of the wonderful and mysterious concealed in its filmy particles."—Detroit Free Press.

DIDN'T ATTEND THE WEDDING.

Unpleasant Experience of a Maysville Couple at Cincinnati This Week.

"All's well that ends well." Brief mention was made yesterday of the unpleasant experience of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Bradley in Cincinnati this week. Now that it's all over, they no doubt enjoy a good laugh at each other's expense.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley went down to attend the marriage of Rev. Robert Tolle and Miss Julia Stitt. Shortly after noon they stopped at a jewelry store near the Palace Hotel to look at some goods.

While in the store Mr. Bradley told his wife that he was going over to the Palace Hotel to get his shoes shined and that he would be back again in a few minutes. After he had gone his wife left the store, but told the clerk that if her husband returned to tell him she would be back in half an hour.

When Mr. Bradley returned, the clerk delivered the message, and he waited until the half hour was up, but his better-half failed to make her appearance. He expected her every moment, however, and continued to wait. The hour drew near for the wedding over in Covington and still Mrs. Bradley had not returned.

Mr. Bradley finally became uneasy over his wife's absence and started out to search for her. The afternoon was spent in the search, but still no trace of the missing one.

Mr. Bradley was almost distracted by this time. At 9 o'clock he visited the Central Depot in hopes of finding her. She was not there, however. He told some Maysville friends who were taking the train about his troubles, and then went back up town and notified the police.

When his friends reached Maysville at 10:45, they found a conveyance waiting at the depot for him. They soon learned that Mrs. Bradley had returned home on an earlier train, and a telegram was sent him to that effect.

Mrs. Bradley is a stranger in Cincinnati, and on leaving the store she was soon lost in the "big city" and was unable to find her way back to the establishment where her husband was waiting for her. She did find her way to the depot, however, and took the accommodation train for home.

THE MONEY POWER.

Swelling Tide of Protest To McKinley Against War, From the Banking Interests.

NEW YORK, March 22.—A dispatch from Washington to the World says:

"Wall street is actively at work to prevent a war.

"Yesterday and to-day a swelling tide of protest against war has reached the Administration. Important banking interests in New York, Chicago, Boston and elsewhere have called attention to the danger of free silver. It is urged from many sources that specie would not bear the drain of war.

"The country would inevitably be thrown on a silver basis were the hundreds of millions necessary to be expended called for.

"The movement is apparently organized.

"I am informed that to-morrow the pressure will be more acute.

"The interview with Senator Hale aroused the great money centers.

"Senators have also received telegrams from similar sources.

"Washington is in a condition of suspense that may be described as agonizing. Scarcely any other subject than possible war is discussed. The delays in the arrival of the Maine report tell on the nerves of thousands. The strain is intense. Senators and Representatives share it. The coming of Monday, with all the day may bring forth, is ardently desired."

THE Postoffice department gives notice of a very important ruling relating to postal cards. There are thousands, possibly millions, of postal cards in the possession of large business houses and their correspondents all over the country that are through this decision rendered valueless, says the Times-Star. The Postoffice department claims that postal cards having printed matter on the backs, of blank forms for orders and on the face the address and business of the firm constitute an advertisement and is a violation of law.

Friday's Cash Sale!

HOSIERY DAY.—Friday is our Hosiery day. It is Hosiery day in every home. Mothers take an inventory, darn heels and toes and discard many stockings with a sigh. Hosiery bought at our Friday sale will enlighten this burden, for then you can purchase two pairs at about the price of one. The more you buy the more you save. Such quantities and such prices are not often linked. A season's supply would be prudent policy.

WOMEN'S HOSIERY NO. 1.—Guaranteed absolutely fast black, extra fine weave and seamless, our regular 12c. stocking, Friday 7c. a pair. No. 2, same fabric and style as above but slightly heavier in weight and closer in weave; our regular 18c. value, 12c. a pair. No. 3, soft, elastic and very closely woven, 49c. a regular 18c. value, 12c. a pair. No. 4, imported, reasonable weights, pair, would be fairly priced at a half more; will wear like a shoe. If you've been ribbed or plain, high spliced heel and toe; will wear like a shoe. No. 5, lisle thread, plain or lace striped, beautiful black, double sole, heel and toe, 25c. a pair. Supply of the above last two lots limited, and that all our customers have an equal chance we cannot sell more than four pairs to one.

CHILDREN'S HOSIERY.—Clothing childish feet is a question. Cheap stockings look cheap; fine stockings cost a good deal. Here's relief: Children's Fast Black and Tan Hosiery, seamless, shaped exactly like the foot, no heel pockets or toe bags, the long legs snug and elastic, built with double knees. "Outgrow them?" Yes. "Wear them out?" Well hardly. Two grades, 9c., 12c. You cannot buy here, in Cincinnati or in any market such values as we offer Friday. It is the best of our best efforts to introduce our Hosiery stock to this community, to give the trade bargains they will long remember.

May honor always illumine his pathway. Tolleboro mourns the loss of one of her oldest and most venerable citizens, Mr. Joseph Ruark, who unexpectedly departed this life Thursday, March 17th. Such is the issue of the human family, yet may we not say as the blessed Master of old: "Not my will, but thine oh God, be done." "I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord, Over mountain or hill or sea; I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord, I'll be what you want me to be."

The dyspeptic carries a dreadful load on his back. It seems as if he were really made up of two men. One of them ambitious, brainy and energetic; the other sick, listless, peevish and without force. The weak man weighs the other one down. The dyspeptic may be able to do pretty good work one day, and the next day because some little indiscretion in eating, he may be able to do nothing at all. Most cases of dyspepsia start with constipation. Constipation is the cause of nine-tenths of all human sickness. Some of its symptoms are sick and bilious headache, dizziness, sour stomach, loss of appetite, foul breath, windy belching, heartburn, pain and distress after eating. All these are indicative of derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, and all are caused by constipation. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the quickest, easiest and most certain cure for this condition. They are not violent in action. HERO FIRE FIGHTERS

THEIR RISKS INCREASE IN THE RATIO OF OUR PROGRESS.

Their Sacrifices Have In Some Instances Produced Beneficial Laws—But Modern Buildings Add Enormously to Their Work.

Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives" and other studies of tenement house life, contributes to The Century in the series of "Heroes of Peace" an article on "Heroes Who Fight Fire." Mr. Riis says of the fireman:

His life is too full of real peril for him to expose it recklessly—that is to say, needlessly. From the time when he leaves his quarters in answer to an alarm until he returns he takes a risk that may at any moment set him face to face with death in its most cruel form. He needs nothing so much as a clear head, and nothing is prized so highly, nothing puts him so surely in the line of promotion, for as he advances in rank and responsibility the lives of others as well as his own come to depend on his judgment. The act of conspicuous daring which the world applauds is oftenest to the fireman a matter of simple duty that had to be done in that way because there was no other. Nor is it always or even usually the hardest duty, as he sees it. It came easy to him because he is an athlete trained to do such things and because, once for all, it is easier to risk one's life in the open, in the sight of one's fellows, than to face death alone, caught like a rat in a trap. That is the real peril which he knows too well, but of that the public hears only when he has fought his last fight and lost.

How literally our everyday security—of which we think, if we think of it at all, as a mere matter of course—is built upon the supreme sacrifice of these devoted men we realize at long intervals, when a disaster occurs such as the one in which Chief Bresnan and Foreman Rooney lost their lives. They were crushed to death under the great water tank in a Twenty-fourth street factory that was on fire. Its supports had been burned away. An examination that was then made of the water tanks in the city discovered 8,000 that were either wholly unsupported, except by the roof beams or propped on timbers, and therefore a direct menace, not only to the firemen when they were called there, but daily to those living under them. It is not pleasant to add that the department's just demand for a law that should compel landlords either to build tanks on the wall or on iron supports has not been heeded yet; but that is unhappily an old story.

Seventeen years ago the collapse of a Broadway building during a fire convinced the community that stone pillars were unsafe as supports. The fire was in the basement, and the firemen had turned the hose on. When the water struck the hot granite columns, they cracked and fell, and the building fell with them. There were upon the roof at the time a dozen men of the crew of Truck Company No 1, chopping holes for smoke vents. The majority clung to the parapet and hung there till rescued. Two went down into the furnace from which the flames shot up 20 feet when the roof broke. One, Fireman Thomas J. Dougherty, was a wearer of the Bennett medal too. His foreman answers on parade day, when his name is called, that he "died on the field of duty." These at all events did not die in vain. Stone columns are not now used in supports for buildings in New York.

So one might go on quoting the perils of the firemen as so many steps forward for the better protection of the rest of us. It was the burning of the St. George flats and more recently of the Manhattan bank, in which a dozen men were disabled, that stamped the average fireproof construction as faulty and largely delusive. One might even go further and say that the fireman's risk increases in the ratio of our progress or convenience. The water tanks came with the very high buildings, which in themselves offer problems to the fire fighters that have not yet been solved.

The very air shafts that were hailed as the first advance in tenement house building added enormously to the fireman's work and risk as well as to the risk of every one dwelling under their roofs by acting as so many huge chimneys that carried the fire to the open windows opening upon them in every story. More than half of all the fires in New York occur in tenement houses. When the tenement house commission of 1894 sat in this city, considering means of making tenements safer and better, it received the most practical help and advice from the firemen, especially from Chief Bresnan, whose death occurred only a few days after he had testified as a witness. The recommendations upon which he insisted are now part of the general tenement house law.

Some recently published French memoirs throw an interesting light on the manner in which the French republic came to bear the nickname "Marianne." During the days of the "white terror" there was an old woman called La Mere Marianne, whose duty it was to mop up the pavement after an execution. In this capacity she attended the decapitation of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, as well as other distinguished victims. The gay hearted royalists jeered at her under her familiar name, which came to be applied to the revolutionary party. Later the secret societies adopted it as a watchword, and "Marianne" came to be used as a revolutionary symbol, even by the Italian carbonari.

THE MOON AND I.

A golden moon that leans her gentle face
On the blue darkness of the summer sky—
We watched her steal aloft a little space,
My love and I.
Parting the opal clouds, upward she rose
To wander lonely mid the stars on high.
We thought our world as bright as one of those,
My love and I.
Dear love, the moonlight smote your rippling hair
And made you smile you knew not how nor why.
My heart beat strangely as we lingered there,
My love and I.
I asked her, fooled by the bewildering light,
If she would try to love me by and by.
She rose and left me. I stood in the night,
The moon and I.

Oysters after they have been brought away from the sea know by instinct the exact hour when the tide is rising and approaching their beds, and so of their own accord open their shells to receive their food from the sea, as if they were still at home.

The Coal You Didn't Order
Is what got for you a cold reception at home. If you want to have "a hot time" at your house twenty-four hours in the day use SEMI-CANNEL COAL. It burns clean and not too fast; throws out a steady, strong heat and holds fire all night. Take a trial order to-morrow—and when you order a load you'll get FULL WEIGHT every time, being one of the things we are very particular about.
